

Variety's the spice of life,
That gives it all its flavor.

FEMALE CURIOSITY.

A worthy 'spice of sober life,
Had a conceded boating wife;
Of him she daily made comment,
Hence her name, 'Female Curiosity'.
She had to find mankind with blame,
And on their errors build her fame.
Her lazing subject of dispute,
Was Eve and the forbidden fruit.
"Had I been Eve," she often said,
"Man had not half so woman died."
I will not keep the sides of your
Poor little creatures, but you are welcome,
To grace my bosom more,
I never had so ill mark'd;
Nor from a van de room to know,
Kosal'd on my race such wise."

The 'spice' replied, "I am true,
The same still lives in you;
Tempted alike, I dare believe,
You would have dosed'd like Eve."
The lady smirched and said dryly,
Both curiosity and pride.

The 'spice' said, "I am a damer,
Read'st to fit this pretty sister;
But I am not the only woman here,
He that in certain seasons address'd her;

"Madam, the man intended least
With which our wedding day a grace'd,
With you I must not share your
For business summons me away,

Or leave you, but I have no care
But to be with you, and to be with you."

The 'spice' said, "The 'spice' was gone,
The morning long did sheil;

She now a wife or could gather a flower,

Or charm the eye, or pluck the rose;

But while she rid'd from this to that,

From whom she loves so well,

She left her home, with half-sorrows

Down to Chariot street, said she.

"I will in all likelihood and your dear little
